Tyler Shough.

Despite his concern of a MNM, Devon ended up victorious this week. Devon, however, deserves a loss for benching his defense. That is an offense equivalent to kneeling the ball out starting in the 3rd quarter with a 21 point lead. Regardless, Tyler Shough and some Broncos lost the game this week for David G.

Joey's Luck Continues to Roll.

Jayden Daniels, despite the absolute failure of a play on the last play of his game against the Giants, won Joey this week. Vic's team was a no show. Somehow Vic is 2-3, despite being one of the league's lowest scorers. This week, however, Joey was the beneficiary of Vic's poor performances and injury luck.

Raiders D and Kyle Pitts Benching Sinks Dejon

Dejon had a tough week due to byes and injuries. And yet, Kyle Pitts new so, as he popped off on his bench with 15 points Dejon could've used this week. Meanwhile, the Raiders D sank Dejon's chances of winning with a -6 point performance. Cesar's three headed monster of WRs won, but he's desperately trying to shore up his RB room. A trade seems impending soon.

George Files Saga: George Returns to Country, Is Set to Testify in Front of Congress Regarding the "Nut Files."

GAME OF THE WEEK:

A face, a team, a game, a man, a thought, a trick—a trick to block a kick.

Greg Rousseau snatched victory from the jaws of defeat by blocking a kick, and denying Ben's miraculous MNM comeback. In a display of absolute fantasy cinema, David M survived a scare against Ben's team, leaving them on opposite ends of the un/defeated spectrum. Fantasy Football, much like real life, can be decided by one singular play.

Maye Carries George to Victory Against Jolo.

Unfortunately for Jolo, George's team showed up this week. And when George's team shows up they pop off. The subway manager scored 51.2, one of the highest scores seen in my memory of IBB history. Jolo is left wondering what could've been as he stares down the barrel of 0-6. While George gets a huge win on the board to stick in the wildcard hunt.

Dylan Keeps It Pushing.

If Ceedee Lamb played, could Jhajuan have won? Maybe. But Dylan's team put up another solid all around performance on the backs of Henry, Evans, Adam, Tlaw, and Bowers to win three straight after a seemingly poor draft. Meanwhile, Jhajuan has lost two in a row and is losing the edge on the rest of us bums.

Unstoppable Force v. Immovable Object: Could Devon make a trade with George soon?
