GAME OF THE WEEK

DEJON EDGES DYLAN BY HALF A POINT, 121.95 TO 121.4, DOUBLES HIS WIN TOTAL IN THIS WEEK'S MONDAY NIGHT MIRACLE

This game had everything huh? Simultaneously the game of the week, upset of the week, and, logically, the manager of the week (Dejon). Dejon's team saw me lock in 1-9 and sat up in the chair, for once, winning the game by .55, despite Brandon McManus's (0.0) attempt to lose the game. Chris Olave (21.4) and George Kittle (24.9) contributed the most to Dejon's victory. But don't forget Alvin Kamara (14.5), Saquon Barkley (13.1), Zay Flowers (12.1) and Khalil Shakir (12.8)! The worst part of it all is if Dylan started Jordan Mason (4.1) instead of Chuba Hubbard (2.5), he would've won. Or if Brock Bowers (3.7) did anything on TNF. The bright side is Dylan has some interesting keeper options in Woody Marks (16.1), Bowers, Tez Johnson (20.2), or Skattebo.

Dejon's season is effectively over, but I respect the hustle of dragging Dylan into the pits of hell and out of the playoff race. Dylan will have to make up ground and get help to make it in now. His future is in the hands of y'all.

I bet Dejon is real invested in the Tyler Shough. Shout out Chris Olave man. A triumphant return to Carolina despite last season's trauma.

WEEKLY GAMES RECAP

JHAJUAN POPS OFF, SCORES 183.15 TO BEN'S 133.3, AND TAKES THE FIRST SEED

Well, I do know that both teams played their best lineups. And that ended up with Jhajuan blowing Ben out pretty handedly. Jhajuan had 5 players score over 20: Jaxson Dart (28.7) (rip), TreVeyon Henderson (28), Nico Collins (22.6), Rome Odunze (20.6) and Drake London (24.4). Meanwhile, Ben only had Emeka Egbuka (23.5) do the same. Ben once seemed like the sure thing, but he's fallen back as other teams have continued to succeed.

I don't know why y'all let this man Jhajuan bullshit y'all every year this man drafts juiced teams and acts like his team is ass. Also, is the TreVeyon Henderson break out real, or is this week an aberration? We'll see when Mike Vrabel allegedly feeds him a "big load." Look if that's the secret sauce to the Patriots success... who am I to judge?

- Tl;dr: Jhajuan's team popped off, Ben's didn't.
- Ben will be happy to have Mahomes and Higgins back from bye. He also adds Ashton Jeanty, Jaylen Waddle, and Jauan Jennings in the mix. We'll see how it works out! But a shake up may have been necessary at .500.
- The Saints offense strategy—Olave (8.7), Kamara (.7) & Shaheed (13.3)—has failed this season.

What you see when you stand outside a white frat house (a little redundancy never hurt).

GEORGE DEFEATS DAVID G 159 TO 144.25, ENDS DAVID G'S MICKEY MOUSE RUN, KEEPS PLAYOFF HOPES ALIVE.

Special teams win games. George has been starting the Chargers D/St (13) and Dicker the Kicker (13) for a few weeks now and they've been netting him 20+ points for a while. The 20 point difference between the two teams D/St and Kicker's was a good enough margin to win by. Don't underestimate those spots! George's team had a real solid outing. Zaire Franklin (18), Breece (19.5) Alec Pierce (19.9), Justin Herbert (18.9) and Stefon Diggs (15.6) all contributed to the dub.

David G had a great performance from his TE duo of Theo Johnson (14.5) and Cade Otton (17.2). David G's team had 2 of the top 3 scorers in this game with Ladd McConkey (20.7) and Josh Allen (24.4). Ultimately it wasn't enough to overcome George's team effort.

- Tldr: A solid team effort from George.
- Bijan Robinson (10.8) was outscored by Tyler Allgeier (18.45), who David G benched for Isiah Davis (2.85). What a genius.
- Deebo Samuel (12.9) had a bounce back week and Alec Pierce was a sharp play knowing that Atlanta plays a lot of cover 1. Will he be as good against cover 2 schemes?

Is that a future $20+ mil wide receiver I see? White boy winter is ready for lift off.

VIC KEEPS DEVON DOWN IN A 125.2 TO 110.9 IN AN ULTIMATELY UNDERWHELMING PROJECTED GAME OF THE WEEK

Devon has now dropped 3 straight and has dropped from the 1 seed to the 2nd seed. Both these teams were pretty shit, but the massive difference maker was super star De'Von Achane (40.5). Vic had only 3 other players score over 10: Daniel Jones (18.05), Travis Etienne (15.7), and Jake Bates (14.5).

A tough loss for Devon, it could've been closer without injuries to Kincaid (5.7) and Gadsden (4.3), but who knows if the tight ends would really have carried the team over the finish line. All I know is Devon must be asking himself every day when Bucky Irving is coming back, CMC (17.6) can only take his team so far.

- Tl;dr: A mediocre game, but one that was won by a superstar performance.
- Vic is going to need to get more than 15 points total from AJ Brown (3.3), DK Metcalf (6.5), Keenan Allen (3.9) and Romeo Doubs (1.5) if he wants to keep winning games, however.
- Devon's team is really injured right now, but will they get healthy in time for the playoffs?

Best fantasy running back ROS? Achane has had an incredible season, despite Miami's disappointing season.

LIONS, COLTS CARRY JOEY TO VICTORY IN A 181.95 TO 151.45 AGAINST DAVID M

Are you fucking kidding me??? Jonathan Taylor scored 51 on his way to a potential MVP trophy. Then Joey gets 34 from Jared Goff and 23.9 from Jamar Williams. AND HE ONLY GOT 16.8 FROM THE SUN GOD. If you combine those 4, Pittman Jr. and the Colts D/St, Joey gained 135.8 points from them. That's only about 15 points less than David M's whole team combined.

The worse thing for David M is he drops to .500. But he's at the top of the pack of the .500 teams, so things could be worse. It's hard to be mad at a loss when a 50 bomb is dropped on you. Sometimes you just gotta be there for the experience, not the outcome.

- Tldr: Once again, Joey gets carried by the Lions and Colts.
- David M had a relatively disappointing game from Rico Dowdle (15.3). David M has to hope Carolina can find the juice in the running game again, otherwise he could be kicking himself after how Treyveon Henderson looked.
- Joey kept his playoff hopes alive this week. But can he survive the Colts bye next week? The Lions and Colts have been his engine, will he drive without it?

Jonathan Taylor is thrilled to get a week off after putting the Colts on his back all season.

CESAR HANDLES JOLO, WINS 174.5 TO 145.95, BREAKS FREE FROM THE 5-5 PACK

Cesar squeezed the last of the juice out of Ashton Jeanty (15.3), Jauan Jennings (17.1), and Jaylen Waddle (20.9) before trading them away to Ben. Combined with another 37 piece from Stafford, 27.7 from McBride, and 17.4 from Puka, Cesar coasted to victory in this one and jumps up the standings to a firm 4th, up from 6th last week.

Jahmyr Gibbs (38.2) tried his best, but unfortunately for him it's been a long season that'll be ending soon. Jolo's season is on life support and he has a big game against Dejon to make any type of magic happen.

- Tl;dr: Cesar's superstars & supporting cast overwhelmed Jolo's star power.
- Cesar could've had more if Judkins (10.5) and JK Dobbins (9.4) played to their standards. Cesar seems poised for a deep playoff run.
- The upshot for Jolo, if any, is that DeVonte Smith (16.9) seems to be WR1 in Philly.

Electric player, but couldn't carry his team to victory. That's been the story of the season for Jolo.

WEEKLY MATCHUP PREVIEW AND PREDICTIONS

PREDICTED MATCHUP OF THE WEEK: Jolo v. Dejon

- This may not be as flashy as the below matchups, but, I'd have to assume that the winner of this game will eliminate the other's playoff hopes. Who doesn't love a battle to the death? It's a tough choice, but my gut tells me Jolo.

Jhajuan v. Cesar

- In any other week this is the matchup of the week. This might be a championship preview. The throughline is last week's trade between Ben & Cesar. Who will reap the rewards? Jhajuan's team has been red hot the last 2 weeks scoring almost 400 points, Cesar isn't too far behind. That gap makes me lean Jhajuan to win.

Vic v. Ben

- These teams are evenly matched. Both have good matchups for their players. Will the depth trio of Jeanty, Waddle, and Jennings lead Ben to victory, or will he regret hitting accept on last week's blockbuster trade? This one to me is a toss up. I have to pick one, though and my pick is Vic. Count on a big Achane game (jinx).

David G v Joey

- No JT, No Pittman, No Colts D/ST? Knowing Joey the Lions will drop 125 collectively. But if there ever were a week for me to pick David G, it'd be this one. There's a lot of good matchups in his favor. I predict David G to win.

George v. Devon

- Devon has lost three in a row and has about 10 players with injury designations, but I can't bet against a team with such a high ceiling week to week. George's players have some tough matchups this week too. I'm picking Devon but I wouldn't be shocked if George wins this one.

David M v. Dylan

- You can't count out the team who has Brock Bowers. But what an unfortunate season it's been for Dylan. However, David M has too much fire power and JSN is lighting the world on fire. I have to pick David M.

COMMISH PICK'EM'S RECORD:

6-6; call it, heads or tails?

- Last week picks:
 - I'm an idiot → Devon; David M; & Dylan (sorry, cursed)
 - Called it → Jhajuan; Cesar; & George (you're welcome)

WEDNESDAY WAIVER RECAP:

- Vic spent big on Caleb Williams using ~43% of his remaining budget on him.
- Jerry Jeudy was a hot commodity. Four teams made claims on him.
- Justin Fields experiment is over(?) in Devonland
